Education

APASL School of Hepatology

In 2012, APASL launched the School of Hepatology in Delhi. The purpose of this school is to induct and train a new generation of hepatologists. Applicants are currently practicing physicians / scientists employed in a hepatology-oriented department in Asia Pacific region. The duration of the course is four weeks.

APASL Early Career Fellowships

The objective of the fellowship is to foster career development by encouraging the beneficial experience of working in a different clinical or research environment in another country in the Asia Pacific region. These fellowships provide for advanced training in health and medical research in any country in the Asia Pacific region and enable fellows to work in a clinical environment or on a research project with nominated advisers.
